

Shakujii Park

Information on the Park

Tokyo Metropolitan Shakujii Park is composed of two beautiful serene ponds; Sanpoji-ike and Shakujii-ike encircled by abundant nature and historical sites including the Ruins of Shakujii Castle which hold the remnants of Musashino in the olden days.

The Sanpoji Pond is surrounded by rich nature including the Marsh plant colonies, a Natural Monument of Japan, and exudes a peaceful atmosphere.

In contrast to the area surrounding Sanpoji Pond, the scene at Shakujii Pond is more open and lively. The seasonal views of cherry blossoms, colored leaves, precious plants, and wild birds make boat rides on Shakujii Pond an epic experience.

Ruins of Shakujii Castle

To the southeast of Sanpoji Pond are the remains of the main Shakujii Castle, which is designated as a historic site by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government. The Shakujii Castle is said to have fallen in 1477 during the Muromachi period when it was attacked by Ota Dokan, and was later destroyed.

Sanpoji Pond Marsh plant colonies

The Sanpoji Pond Marsh Plant Colonies was designated as a Natural Monument of Japan in 1935, and the surroundings of the pond's floating island there is a community of hydrophilic plants such as Mitsugashiwa bogbean, Japanese iris, Yellow water-lily, and Hange-shou Asian lizard's tail.
